

Associated Press Photo
Allen W. Dulles, new chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, leans over to greet his son, Marine Lieut. Allen M. Dulles at Andrews Air Force Base. Young Dulles, who was flown here yesterday from Korea, was wounded November 14. The lieutenant was carried from the plane on a stretcher and taken to the Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Md.

Father Greets Lieut. Dulles, Here for Wounds Treatment

Marine Lieut. Allen Macy Dulles, son of the new chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, entered Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday for treatment of wounds suffered in a 24-hour period in Korea last November.

The 23-year-old Marine was met at Andrews Air Force Base by his father, Allen W. Dulles, who accompanied his wounded son to the hospital. Young Dulles was flown here aboard a hospital plane from Travis Air Force Base, Calif.

The lieutenant, nephew of Secretary of State John Foster

Dulles, was wounded severely in the head, back and arm on November 14 while directing mortar fire against the Communists. He has been recommended for the Navy Cross for gallantry in action.

Hospital authorities said Dulles' general condition is satisfactory but that his case will require "thorough study and indefinite hospitalization."

Born in New York City, Dulles was commissioned in the Marine Corps after graduation from Princeton University in 1951. His parents live at 1308 29th st. nw.

CPYRGHT

CPYRGHT